

Mandibular supraprosthesis retained by dental implants - CASE REPORT

Ljupka Lazarova, Evgenija Trajkoska

Menthor: Doc. D-r Kiro Papakoca

Introduction and aim: For an implantology treatment to be successful it is necessary to know the indications and contraindications for placement of implants and ancillary elements.

The aim of this study was to know the advantages of and benefits of mandibular supraprosthesis which is impacted with implants on a patient.

Clinical case: It is a patient who has mandibular supraprosthesis structure which is retained by the dental implant.

Results: After seven days of intervention was made and control was established excellent retention and stability of the loaded implant.

Taking a print of making superstructure

Structure which is placed on the patient

Conclusion: There was a positive effects, like stable connection helped by the dental implant.