The Journal of Languages for Specific Purposes (JLSP) is an open access journal and publishes studies on Applied Modern Languages (English, French, German and Italian) and Language teaching at academic levels of specialization for various professions or fields of activity.

The purpose of this journal is to create a communication platform for foreign language teachers with academic activity in non– philological fields and it aims to facilitate exchange and sharing of experience and ideas. Given the specificity of their intermediate status, between philology and various fields of specialty, these teachers – researchers at the same time – need their own forum to express the aforementioned dichotomy and pluralism. It is this role that the journal wants to assume, offering its contributors help in their didactic activity, through the exchange of experience between academics. At the same time, the journal shall provide these specialists, besides new perspectives, a large recognition and professional prestige for the research work they undertake.

The studies published in the Journal of Languages for Specific Purposes fall into one of the following categories: state-of-art articles, methodological studies, conceptual articles, original research reports, case studies, book reviews - under one of the journal's sections: Language studies, Applied Modern Languages, Teaching Languages for Specific Purposes, Professional Communication. All papers submitted to JLSP undergo a process of double-blind peer review.
