The screenshot shows a Zoom meeting interface. The main content is a presentation slide titled "Do Humans Alone Have Language?". The slide contains the following text:

- Everything communicates toward something but humans alone communicate verbally in sentences composed of discrete words that take the roles of subjects, verbs, and objects.
- Animals communicate through communication behavior.
- They use signals which can include visual; auditory, cues etc.

Below the text are three images: a young child petting a black dog, a silhouette of a person kneeling and talking to a dog, and a blue sound wave graphic. The Zoom interface at the bottom shows a grid of participants, including a host and several attendees. The status bar at the bottom indicates "Slide 29 of 54" and "English (United States)".

The University Goce Delcev – Shtip is marking the 15th anniversary with series of events within the Faculty of Philology. Assistant prof. dr. Alma V. Lama from the University of Business and Technology (UBT) - Pristina, held a guest interactive lecture on 10.03.2022.

She was born in Kosovo where she gained her bachelor degree in English language and literature. She continued with her education and finished her MA and PhD degree at the South-East European University in Tetovo. She is an expert in the field of English studies and contributed to different universities in Kosovo. She is currently working at UBT and is the dean of the English language school. Dr. Lama gave a guest lecture on the topic “Introduction to linguistics” and was aimed at students. There were around 75 listeners, both students and professors after which followed a constructive debate.

Assistant prof. dr. Natka Jankova Alagjovska and assistant prof. dr. Saska Jovanovska from the English department organized the event through which doors to cooperation were opened for the staff and the students as well.
